

Robert Murray McCheyne was born in Edinburgh in 1813 and died at the age of only 29, in 1843. Yet during this short time he lived and taught in such a way that he is thought of by many as one of Scotland's most outstanding ministers.

Though intelligent and schooled in the classics, he is remembered primarily for his humility and hard work in visiting and looking after those in need in his parish; for his direct and simple preaching, and his love of the Bible. He published this method of Bible reading at the beginning of 1843, only weeks before he died. He called it 'Daily Bread'. His main aim was to encourage his own congregation to get to know the Bible 'in all its breadth'.

This booklet has been printed by the family centre, Mill Grove, (formerly known as The Childrens Home and Mission). Started in 1899 in South Wood ford, London, by Herbert White and Rosa Hutchin, it has continued to the present day caring for children in need, teaching them of the love of Jesus Christ and asking God alone to meet all the needs that arise. The story of the development of Mill Grove is told in 'A Place for Us', published by Mill Grove.

One of the most important factors in the process of living and caring at Mill Grove is getting to know God through the reading of the Bible. It is here that we find guidance, encouragement, practical advice and the clue to real life and the meaning of love. Having found it so vital in our own experience we commend it wholeheartedly to you.
